Highlights from the last meeting

What an energetic dinner meeting! Still thrilled! Back to normal attendance of members, visiting Rotarians and friends we had a terrific night. We started by President Linnet asking to recite The Four Way Test divided in: ladies for the Chinese version, gentlemen for the Chinese version. Visiting Rotarians and guest were then introduced by Information Officer, David. During dinner time few announcements were offered by PE Terri: Sunday Brunch on Oct, 28th and Golf Tournament in aid of Youdao Foundation on Nov, 18th. Happy Money was led by Peter and Sophia. A very generous moment: the first to ring the bell was visiting Rotarian Ralph from RC Bamberg who donated for KBD specific cause, followed by PSR Frank Yih, Randal and visiting Rotarian Kurt in support of GOL. President Linnet donated a bottle of ice wine which went to Olivier Ye who did not keep it for himself and donated it to Sophia.

We did not forget our monthly stars, tonight well represented by Frank Yih and Frank Mulligan, Randal, David , Danny and Vivian: happy birthday!!!

Clue moment of the evening, Ignite. It was suddenly clear it was going to be very energetic. Alex started first by letting us exploring rock climbing world. Andy followed by tickling the audience with a psychological/philosophical discussion about what is "cool" and why not, "the coolest"! Last but not least, David. His presentation was extraordinary unexpected: how to survive Zombies invasion. If you did not attend the meeting, you "deserve to be eaten!"

Speakers were so good during Ignite that we ended 10 minutes earlier and we continued enjoying fellowship. We then ended by traditional toast by President Linnet, this time for safe trip and come back soon message to Rtn. Christian Rink who attended his last meeting with us before returning back to Germany. See you soon dear friend.

On December 5, 1993, the People's Republic of China launched the world's largest National Immunization Day (NID) by then. In a 24-hour period, the world's most populous country immunized more children than in all of Asia and Africa. An estimated 100 million children received two doses each of oral polio vaccine at local immunization posts and health centers. Chinese President Jiang Zemin and several state leaders attended immunization sessions in Beijing, as well as in some cities of other provinces. According to a statement 1994 issued by the World Health Organization's (WHO) regional office in Manila: "The support from all sectors of the government and the public was tremendous. Rotary shares a considerable part of the credit for this success by providing vaccine for this NID as well as vaccine for last year's province-wide immunization days."

Rotary helped to support this milestone effort with a PolioPlus grant of US$2 million. Japanese Rotarians were instrumental in helping fund the program, raising US$750,000 in a grassroots effort. (This was in addition to the amount raised in Japan during the PolioPlus Campaign.) Since there were no Rotary clubs in China Mainland, Japan's support was especially helpful. Moreover, Japan's government donated another US$2 million, supplemented by US$300,000 from the country's private sector. The Project story began in October 1989. The Rotary Foundation provided a US$15 million grant to help fund construction of a polio vaccine manufacturing facility in Kunming, Yunnan Province, China. On October 8, 1992, groundbreaking ceremonies were held for what would become one of the largest polio vaccine production plants in the world. The event capped more than 5 years of planning and technical training. The building was a state-of-the-art facility that would produce 100 million doses annually - greatly increasing China's capacity to produce viable polio vaccine. The Netherlands' National Institute of Public Health and a Dutch engineering firm, the DHV Group, helped to design and built the plant. China's Ministry of Health supervised the construction. The award was administered through the World Bank since there was no Rotary club(s) available locally in the People's Republic of China.

Rotary's grant was the largest ever received by the World Bank from a nongovernmental organization. Also in the same month, the Rotary Foundation Trustees awarded China another PolioPlus grant of US$1 million for supplementary immunization vaccine, followed by the above-mentioned US$2 million grant for the national immunization days. Through UNICEF, Rotary also provided a US$899,000 grant for personnel training in surveillance and laboratory work. The program has created 20 training centers and laboratories in China. In March 1992, 20 Chinese physicians and a computer specialist completed a six-week epidemiology workshop in Atlanta, Georgia, and the Centers for Disease Control and the Emory University School of Public Health, U.S.A. Upon returning to China, the physicians started preparations for conducting similar training programs for health workers in their respective areas. The Kunming Plant facility was integral to the effort to eradicate polio world-wide. It was to ensure that, for the first time, children in China would receive vaccine that met the standards set by the World Health Organization (WHO). China represents one fifth of the world's population and has about 23 million new born babies each year. As the world's most populous nation, China was critical to achieving the World Health Organization's goal of global eradication by the year 2000. (It was second only to India in number of polio cases.) China and 28 other countries in the Western Pacific Region had resolved to wipe out polio even earlier - by 1995. Only China and four other countries in the region - Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos, and the Philippines – still by then reported endemic polio. For a country that reported more than 5,000 polio cases in 1990 more than 23% of all cases worldwide – this was a proud achievement. In 1992, China carried out supplemental immunizations in 25 of the country's 30 provinces, after a group of 30 Chinese health officials traveled to Brazil, Mexico, and Guatemala to observe how NIDs were conducted. In the first eight months of January 1993, a record low of 348 cases were reported. Preliminary reports for the historical first round indicated 90% coverage, which did not include house-to-house visits on December 7-8, 1993, to immunize children not reached earlier. Dr. E.G.P. Haran, Rotary's regional advisor for the PolioPlus program in Asia, was a member of a special advance team of 16 international experts who visited China to review preparations for the NIDs. They met with government officials, health personnel, and media to promote the program and strengthen support, and gave lectures add provided recommendations on different approaches to vaccinating children. Dr. Haran noted the great support and enthusiasm for Rotary. "There were banners everywhere welcoming us. Many people were aware of the efforts of Rotary and our health partners." Rotary was working with WHO, UNICEF, the U.S. Centers for Disease Control and Prevention, the Japanese government, and other organizations to help battle polio in China.

Dr. Haran explained that China's national immunization days were modeled after those that had been conducted so successfully in Latin America. "China's success shows that we can transfer the Latin American model to the other side of the Pacific." Dr. Haran said he was encouraged by China's progress. "The bold initiative of national immunization days is going to have a significant effect in creating a momentum in Asia. And without the support of Rotary, this massive immunization effort could not have been achieved on this scale." Additional national immunization days were arranged for 1994-95 and 1995-96. Since 1993, the country had vaccinated twice a year more than 85 million children on each day. During the first three years, China had made dramatic advances in working toward a polio-free world. Once a stronghold of the disease, China had organized some of the world's largest national immunization days (NIDs). The then International PolioPlus Committee Vice Chairman Herbert A. Pigman said the polio eradication program helped Rotary gain the trust and enthusiastic cooperation of the Chinese Government. "China did an excellent job in carrying out this massive public health initiative," said Pigman, noting that more than 160 million children were immunized, reducing polio cases from 10,000 in 1981 to 1,191 in 1992. In appreciation, China invited Rotary International Trustee Chairman Royce Abbey of Australia to observe the second round of polio immunizations conducted on January 5, 1994. Rotary Foundation Trustee Jiichiro F. (Frank) Nakajima of Japan and also from Japan Past District 2640 Governor Masami Hiraoka, the PolioPlus Task Force Coordinator for Asia, joined Royce in China. The team accompanied by WHO West Pacific officers visited Huizhou, Guangdong Province, to observe the local polio immunization. Royce Abbey reported that he personally administered polio vaccine to a number of infants. "We traveled some 100 miles (161 Km) by car on very busy roads outside the major towns to visit country areas. Immunization efforts were visible in all areas. We all agreed we were witnessing a major move toward eradication of polio in China." Thanks to Rotary's efforts, China, along with other countries in the Western Pacific Region, was declared polio-free in October 2001. The Project worth was totally amounted to US$21.94 million, with a span of 5 years from 1989 to 1996. The first two rounds of immunizations were believed to be the largest preventive health campaigns ever conducted anywhere in the history of mankind. So far in the Rotary China History, to date, that was the largest Rotary's gift to and the Rotary Foundation Project in China. Moreover, it was also very exceptionally without a single local Rotary Club available in conducting and monitoring a project of such large scale, while the People's Republic of China was not yet a "Rotary Country".

Herbert K. Lau greeted Royce Abbey in Hong Kong, 1994 (The Presidential Class of 1988-1989)

REMARKS: (1) In October 1987, the author contributed US $1,000 towards this Kunming Project. He was then the first time recognized as a Paul Harris Fellow.

(2) Coincidentally, this Rotary Gift to China happened to be, perhaps, the largest and/or the first foreign aid when most of the leading countries were "playing cool against China" after the "June 4th Tiananmen Issue" in 1989.

Rotary recently learned that scammers have created multiple communication and social media accounts that impersonate RI President Barry Rassin, RI President-elect Mark Maloney, General Secretary John Hewko and perhaps other Rotary leaders. The communication accounts include or involve email, WhatsApp and Viber. The social media accounts have been on LinkedIn, Twitter and Facebook.

These are not authentic Rotary communications. They are phishing and spoofing attempts to obtain money and personal information. The perpetrators may attempt to convince Rotary members to send funds to support alleged Rotary causes. Rotary monitors for and responds to these attempts as part of an ongoing effort to keep member, program participant, and staff data safe. We also work with LinkedIn, Twitter, Facebook, and WhatsApp to remove imposter accounts.

Neither President Rassin's, President-elect Maloney's, nor General Secretary Hewko's authentic accounts have been compromised.

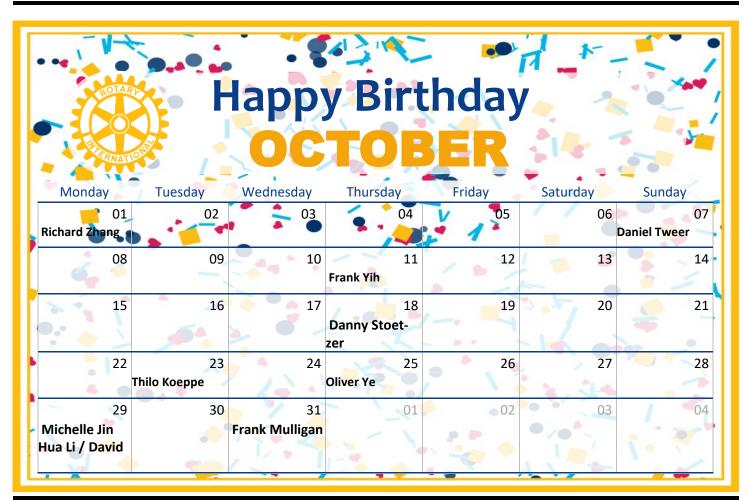

Rotary members should continue to exercise caution: Disregard any suspicious message that offers money, requests money, or asks for your personal information. Avoid opening attachments or following links in suspicious messages. Pay close attention to the details of the email address and signature block to verify the sender.

If you receive what you believe to be a suspicious message from the president, general secretary, or another Rotary leader, please forward it to fraudreport@rotary.org and then delete it immediately.

2018-19 Presidential Theme: Back to Basic

By RCS President, Linnet Kwok

Linnet Kwok – President

I want this year to focus on Rotary's core values, Fellowship and Service.

With fellowship we create good service projects and through service we develop long lasting friendships. They are intertwined.

The arrows represents fellowship and service crisscrossing each other. The arrows also form a globe as we are an international organization and an international club.

RCS has over 20 nationalities. To create fellowship we need members, more members to deliver service projects and more members to grow the club.

To grow the club we need to work on our youth and PR. Many people don't know us or think we are a group of old middle age Anglo Saxon males! On the contrary, we are very diversified.
