The original purposes of Rotary

~ By Herbert K. Lau, Rotary China Historian

In 1930, the Rotary Club of Chicago, The Rotary Club #1, has a committee at work in the endeavor to prepare a history of the Club. An examination was made of all the available literature of the early days of the Club. It was decided to report first a statement as to what was "The purpose of the Club or the Character of the Club" at the time of its founding and immediately thereafter. The report when made was wholly subscribed to by a majority of the committee and of the 1905 members. It was submitted to the Chicago Rotary Club and adopted by the Club as a correct and fair statement as to the character of the Club at its founding and immediately thereafter. Here below is the full text of the Statement:

The original purposes of the Rotary Club of Chicago, it may be said that, as is shown in the first stated objects, the first purpose was the promotion of the business interests of its members. The methods used to accomplish this purpose were:

(a) By affording opportunity to its members to explain their business and display their wares at Club meetings.

The original purposes of Rotary

(b) By constantly emphasizing to its members that any man engaged in a reputable calling should receive the patronage and support of his friends in the conduct of his business.

(c) By steadily encouraging the practice of actually doing for the other fellow as we would like to have him do for us.

The second purpose of the Club was the development of an intimate, personal acquaintanceship, a friendly fellowship, and the play spirit among its members. An additional feature or by-product early developed was the enlightenment of a member as to businesses other than his own, thereby making him a broader business man. A year or so after the founding of the Club, a third purpose was developed which was the enlightenment of its members with regard to, and the participation of its members in, public affairs or community welfare work, thereby making each member a better citizen.

Whatever may have been the exact thought, if there was an exact thought, in the mind of Paul Harris, when he made an explanation of his plan to the other three men who sat with him in the first preliminary meeting, whatever may have been in the minds of Silvester Schiele, Harry Ruggles, Will Jenson, Charlie Newton, and others who joined in the early days, it is undoubtedly true that the early meetings were largely experimental in their character and the various members, according to their points of view, found fellowship, business benefits, fun, or whatever most appealed to them in the Club.

As have been stated by Paul Harris, it was his purpose to organize a fellowship of business and professional men in the large city of Chicago whereby they could have the advantage of acquaintance and friendship and business opportunities such as men in a small community ordinarily have. Friendliness and good fellowship prevailed in the new club from the beginning, but the unique purpose of the Club was for the members to give and to influence business to, and to get business from, fellow members and persons influenced by them. It took direct issue with social clubs and other institutions wherein it was considered dishonorable or unethical to belong for business purposes. No such taboo existed in the Rotary Club. It was declared to be a business club and that it therefore was proper to join it for business purposes.

However, although the inducement given to get a man to join usually was the promise of how much business benefit he would get from his membership in the Club, it was very early agreed that the best exemplar of the Rotary idea was not the one who was trying to get all he could out of his fellow-members, but the one who was trying to be of the greatest helpfulness to his fellow-members.

Furthermore, a direct exchange of business between any two members was not required. For example, "A" might be able to give business to "B" without being situated so as to receive any return from "B", but "B" might be able to do something of value for "C", and "C" in turn might be able to patronize "A". This was called the rotation of business. Therefore, as each Rotarian undertook to help his fellow-Rotarians, without demanding a direct return to him from them, there was produced a condition of altruistic endeavor which lifted the members above or out of the usual selfish attitude of commercial relations.

Notwithstanding the spirit of altruism with regard to one's membership in the Club, it soon became evident that in the opinion of the outside community, the Club was regarded as a self-centered organization in that the good deeds of its members were all done for fellow-members of the Club. Consequently, perhaps partly to quiet criticisms from the outside, and partly because some members of the Club really had a desire to render a service to others besides those who belonged to the Club, an effort was made to engage in civic and charitable work.

The membership originally was limited to one executive from each occupation in order that each member might have all the opportunity to obtain all the business benefit that might come from representing his line of business in the Club. After a while it was seen that while the membership was limited, the method of limiting it created a very representative group of 3 business and professional men, and therefore an ideal assembly for the consideration and discussion of public affairs and of matters pertaining to business in general.

Each year the RI President travels around the world to visit a selective number of clubs from more than 540 districts in over 200 countries. Receiving a visit from the RI President has always been a big honor. Because of the unique situation in China, we have the honor and pleasure of receiving RI president each year during the past 3 years, much to the envy of other districts.

2018-19 Presidential Theme: Back to Basic

By RCS President, Linnet Kwok

Linnet Kwok – President

I want this year to focus on Rotary's core values, Fellowship and Service.

With fellowship we create good service projects and through service we develop long lasting friendships. They are intertwined.

The arrows represents fellowship and service crisscrossing each other. The arrows also form a globe as we are an international organization and an international club.

RCS has over 20 nationalities. To create fellowship we need members, more members to deliver service projects and more members to grow the club.

To grow the club we need to work on our youth and PR. Many people don't know us or think we are a group of old middle age Anglo Saxon males! On the contrary, we are very diversified.

Basic Info of our Club

First chartered on 1 October 1919
 Rechartered on 8 February 2006

Inclusion Factory

Project

The Inclusion Factory gives meaningful employment and training to mentally challenged individuals under real market conditions.

Careers in Care

Project

Careers in Care tackles the issue of a growing aged population in China by teaching migrant workers to care for the elderly.

"Gift of Life" – Heart Surgery

Project

GOL provides life-saving operations their family cannot afford. Over 550 children with congenital heart defects have been saved under the programs executed by the Rotary Club of Shanghai.

Preventing Kashin-Beck disease

Project

The Kashin-Beck disease (KBD) is a neglected disease afflicting mostly poor areas of China and resulting in stunted growth, joint deformities and chronic pain.

The Library Project

Project

The Library Project has established over 1,800 elementary school libraries. It has put more than 1,200,000 Chinese language children's books into the hands of eager young readers.

The Object of Rotary

THE OBJECT of Rotary is to encourage and foster the ideal of service as a basis of worthy enterprise and, in particular, to encourage and foster:

FIRST The development of acquaintance as an opportunity for service;

SECOND High ethical standards in business and professions, the recognition of the worthiness of all useful occupations, and the dignifying of each Rotarian's occupation as an opportunity to serve society;

THIRD The application of the ideal of service in each Rotarian's personal, business, and community life;

FOURTH The advancement of international understanding, goodwill, and peace through a world fellowship of business and professional persons united in the ideal of service

Rotarian Code of Conduct

The following code of conduct has been adopted for the use of Rotarians:

AS A ROTARIAN, I will

- 1) Act with integrity and high ethical standards in my personal and professional life
- 2) Deal fairly with others and treat them and their occupations with respect
- 3) Use my professional skills through Rotary to: mentor young people, help those with special needs, and improve people's quality of life in my community and in the world
- 4) Avoid behavior that reflects adversely on Rotary or other Rotarians
